RESIDENTS and performers enjoyed a showcase of Hackney's wide range of cultures.

Stoke Newington Town Hall was the venue for Hackney Homes' Culture Jam event on 27

October. The afternoon saw performances from a dance group from Hackney's Chinese Community Centre; Portugese singer and guitarist Corina Piatti; Roma Band Kalo Drom;

and street dance group Essen Trick.

FOR ALL YOUNG PEOPLE

By Gracia Douglas

OVER 100 young people turned out to celebrate the official launch of a revamped youth centre that some of them helped to develop.

The Council officially launched Stoke Newington Young People's Centre, Milton Gardens, on 23 October. The event was an opportunity to try some of the services and activities available at the revamped centre – and across the borough.

Highlights included IT and multimedia workshops, healthy eating sessions, free microchipping for dogs, dance demonstrations and sports activities.

The refurbished building was officially opened by Councillor Rita Krishna, Cabinet Member for Children's Services, who was joined by young people from the myplace project group, and staff from the Council's Youth Services for the ribbon cutting. Cllr Krishna said: "There's something here for all young people, whatever their background or interests."

Interest in a creative future

By
Emma Britton

MORE than 70 people from media and creative organisations, developers and investors came together at an event to hear about opportunities to use the 2012 Broadcast and Press Centres in legacy.

The Olympic Park Legacy Company outlined how the Hackney Wick site could become a creative district after the Games, while the Council made new announcements about support that could help businesses interested in moving into the centres.

Mayor of Hackney Jules Pipe said: "The

An aerial image of the centres taken in July (above) and an artist's impression of how they could look when complete (top) centres will have world-class communications infrastructure and will be served by excellent new transport links. It has been our vision for some time to see the site become a creative, digital and media hub, and I'm pleased to see so much interest and support for this from the industry, regional and central Government, and our partners at the Olympic organisations. We will continue to work to secure this employment legacy for our residents and for East London."

Andrew Altman, Chief Executive of the Olympic Park Legacy Company, said: "Innovation and enterprise will help define the long-term future of the Olympic Park and the centre site is a fundamental part of this."

Mayor of London, Boris Johnson, has also supported the centres becoming a media, digital and creative hub in legacy.

There was significant interest from the media and creative industry figures who came along the event on 18 October. One attendee, Richard Boote, owner of Air Studios, said: "I can see an operation such as Air bringing both music recording and post production facilities to the site."

Full impact of spending review

AS details of the Government's Comprehensive Spending Review become clearer, it appears that the majority of funding cuts from central Government to many Councils, including Hackney, will be made next year, rather than being spread evenly over four years as initially indicated. If this is the case, it could mean a reduction in Government funding to the Council of between £50 and £60million in the coming financial year (2011/12). Mayor of Hackney, Jules Pipe, told a meeting of Full Council: "The detail behind last week's Government announcement suggests that the grant cuts aren't spread across four years, but have been front-loaded to take out between £50 and £60million in the first year.

"This means a reduction of around 20 per cent in the first year, not the 7.25 per cent stated by the Government. Unless there are further funding streams that are still to be revealed by the Government to make up this shortfall, the Council will be faced with having to make devastating decisions. Extra grant funding has been given to areas like ours in the past for good reason, but we will now see reductions in grant of more than twice the national average. "I will continue to work to minimise the impact of these cuts on our residents, and the protection of frontline services will remain our priority. I will be lobbying Government and working with colleagues in other authorities to ensure that the most deprived areas are treated more fairly."

Residents on two estates come top in London-wide food growing contest

Green genius

By
Olaide Oyekanmi

RESIDENTS from two Hackney estates have reaped the reward of their green fingers in the London-wide Edible Estates competition.

Somerford and Shacklewell estate won Best Estate Garden; and Haberdasher was named runner up in the Collect and Create category. Both were recognised for their dedication to improving their communal areas and getting residents together to transform their estate into a green haven.

At Somerford and Shacklewell, residents from its Growing Club have planted fruit trees

Some of the residents who are part of the Somerford & Shacklewell estate Growing Club, and the planting projects they have created on unused patches of land and filled forgotten beds with seedlings. Railings have been covered with sunflowers, beans and peas, and many disused areas have now been transformed into homes for plants.

The club is led by Alex Collings and Hedvig Murray, director of social enterprise Get Growing, which supports food growers in Hackney and Brighton.

Both estates are managed by Hackney Homes. Christophe Tabi, Interim Head of Estate Environment, said: "The residents are a really inspirational example of how working together can create such a buzz on the estate around growing your own. Hackney Homes is committed to providing support and help to residents interested in starting similar projects and can assist with funding applications."

Residents changed the landscape on Haberdasher by using a central pole and walls to grow flowers, vegetables and herbs including tomatoes, broad beans, lettuce, rocket, peas, green beans, pumpkin, baby squash, aubergines, mint, rosemary and thyme.

NHS Communities Team, awarded the Somerford and Shacklewell estate a £7,000 grant towards the project. The awards were organised by Capital Growth, an initiative that aims to create 2,012 new community food growing spaces across London by the end of 2012. It also offers practical help, grants, training and support to groups for food growers.

Message from the Mayor

Let us protect our services

YOU may have seen recent media coverage of my comments about the impact of the Government cuts package on Hackney.

When the Chancellor announced the settlement for local government on 20th October, he spoke about an average seven per cent reduction in grants to councils for each of the next four years.

Hackney's response was that, while this was a huge challenge, it was one that we felt we could meet in the coming year. Our track record on savings and efficiencies, which has helped us keep Council Tax frozen for five consecutive years while we improved our frontline services, gave us confidence that we could manage this grant cut while protecting the services you value.

So saving seven per cent or about £26m was tough, but possible without making cuts to front-line services. What wasn't revealed in last week's announcement was that there was a sting in the tail waiting for us behind the Chancellor's words.

As I explained at the last Full Council meeting, now that more details are coming out of the Treasury, it has become clear that, far from an annual saving of 7 per cent, more than 20 per cent of savings will need to be made in one single year. We believe that this will mean that the Government is expecting us to cut between £50m and £60m from next year's budget.

In boroughs such as Hackney the reduction in funding has been made worse by the removal of additional grants that we, and other urban areas, have been receiving to tackle specific problems of economic and social inequality. It looks as though the majority of these grants have been taken away and as far as we can see they won't be given back.

I am calling on the Government to think again, and I will personally be lobbying them on behalf of Hackney and councils across London to do two things: Firstly to restore the grants paid to inner city areas such as Hackney to tackle our significant levels of need. Secondly, to re-phase any grant cuts they insist on making so that we can manage the impact as we planned – evenly over the next four years and to protect our services and our borough.

Get ready for the return of Hackney Empire's legendary pantomime

THE life of a showbiz cow – fans, photographers, theatre stages and all the bread rolls you can eat.

At least that's what Alice experienced during her one-off Hackney Empire appearance to launch the theatre's much-anticipated pantomime, Jack and the Beanstalk.

But there's no chance of her replacing the theatre's much-loved bovine costume, Buttercup.

The Empire's press spokesperson, Ewan Thomson, said: "I don't think Alice would be up for eight shows a week, so we'll be doing things the old fashioned panto way – one at the front and one at the back."

The curtain rises again on 27 November for the latest annual show, starring Clive Rowe and written and directed by Susie McKenna. The cast, which also features Abigail Rosser as Off Her Trolley Molly and Jaygann Ayeh as Jack, revealed a few hints as to what audiences can expect, including a 'giant of all giants'.

“We're flexible with the audience. I do adlib but you also have to know when to bring it back”

Clive said: "We're flexible with the audience. I do adlib but you also have to know when to bring it back. You have to keep the five-year-olds. They have to believe in the dragons and the fairies, while most of the adults have seen it all before."

Susie added: "And there's a point where the audience can choose how the rest of the panto goes. Hopefully if we've done our job, they'll make the right decision."

And if they make the 'wrong' decision? "I'll sneak off and let the actors on stage deal with it," she laughed.

The 109-year-old theatre reduced its programming for a 'period of reflection' in January, but since summer has offered concerts from Arcade Fire and Mark Ronson, comedy from Russell Brand, and popular shows like Havana Rakatan. It also played host to film crews for the new Captain America film and was featured on Sky1's talent show Must Be The Music.

As in previous years, last season's Aladdin received emphatic praise in the national press, keeping the Mare Street theatre the top spot for panto in London.

RESIDENTS and visitors celebrated Hackney's diverse population at a Stoke Newington Town Hall extravaganza.

Nearly 200 people turned out for Hackney Culture Jam, which aimed to highlight some of the many cultures and nationalities to be found in the borough.

On the bill in the recently refurbished Art Deco venue were Congolese sounds from Kesai Mesai; traditional Turkish dancing; Roma music; and a street dance group.

Stoke Newington Resident, Ms Velda Jeffers went along to the event. She said: "This was culture at its best. Young, old and a diverse community were present."

The event, on 27 October, was organised by Hackney Homes. Following a successful Black History Month celebration last year, the organisation that manages the borough's Council housing decided to widen the scope, to include performers from even more of the borough's wide range of cultures and nationalities.

There were also traditional dresses; food and drink from around the world; dancing from residents; and speeches from Hackney's Deputy Mayor, Karen Alcock, and Chair of Hackney Homes' Board, Rupert Tyson.

Mr Tyson said: "What a fantastic opportunity to celebrate all our experiences of living in Hackney. This makes me even more proud to call myself a Hackneyite."

News in brief

Residents celebrating bonfire night or Diwali are urged to take extra care due to a planned Fire Brigades Union strike

Fire Brigade planned strike

AT the time of going to press, the Fire Brigades Union (FBU) was planning industrial action from 10am on 5 November, until 9am on 7 November.

If the strike goes ahead, it means that there will be reduced levels of emergency cover in London during the Bonfire Night and Diwali period.

The Council is urging residents to consider the following safety advice during the strike:

- Take extra care when cooking or smoking
- Make sure that you have a working smoke alarm
- If a fire breaks out, retreat to safety and call 999
- Never go back inside a burning building.

Residents are advised to attend an organised firework display. Due to the strike action, check that displays are still going ahead before setting out. If celebrating at home, remember:

- Light fireworks at arms length with a taper. Stand well back
- Never go back to fireworks once they are lit
- Build bonfires well clear of buildings, garden sheds, fences and hedges
- Never use flammable liquids to start a bonfire
- Don't leave a bonfire unattended. An adult should supervise until it has burnt out.

Nominate a neighbour

HACKNEY Homes is calling on residents to recognise those making other people's lives better in the community – by nominating them for an Active Residents Award.

There are four categories to choose from: Resident of the Year; Group of the Year; Young Resident of the Year; and the Ron Devoti Award for long service to Hackney. All short listed residents will be invited to an awards ceremony – and they could be the winner of £1,000 prize money to spend on local projects. Last year, Alice Burke (above) from Nightingale Estate won the Ron Devoti Award. She said: "To realise that so many people appreciated what I was doing over the years, I was pleasantly surprised and thankful."

With her prize money, she took 25 residents from her estate to the West End to see a show, as a token of her appreciation to those who supported her.

RESIDENTS enjoyed a day of inclusive sports at the last of three popular Activity For All events to take place in the borough in 2010.

More than 300 disabled and non-disabled participants of all ages sampled the multi-activity day at the Britannia Leisure Centre, with sports ranging from archery to trampolining.

The event was organised by Hackney Ark alongside

GLL and the Council's 2012 Sports Unit.

Some of the art activities were provided by local mobile play organisation, Albion Kids Show, which offered soft play, T-shirt painting, a mural, and a sensory room space for children and adults with severe learning disabilities.

Kunbi Jones from Hackney Ark thanked all the partners involved in the 24 October event. She said: "We try to be as innovative as we can to support adults and children with disabilities.

"It's important to find fun and imaginative new experiences for people, sometimes using light, touch, vibration and smell."

Cllr Guy Nicholson, Cabinet Member for Regeneration and the 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games, said: "More and more of us are joining in as 2012 comes closer. The Activity For All open days are proving to be a great opportunity for people of all ages and abilities to come along and have a

Teenagers at a previous NDCS event

Over to you

YOUNG deaf people are invited to an event at the Geffrye Museum on 20 November, where they can share their views and help shape hearing services in their area. The event aims to pull together views on local audiology services, as well as offering craft activities and a chance to take a look at the museum's latest exhibits.

The event is part of Over To You, a project set up by the National Deaf Children's Society (NDCS), to allow 13-16-year-olds to share opinions on deafness, and on making the transition from child to adult services. Over To You was developed in response to a consultation with 1,400 young people, showing that more than 50 per cent of deaf 14-18-year-olds wanted more information on deafness and communication.

Valerie Copenhagen, Project Manager at NDCS, said: "NDCS wants to give deaf young people an opportunity to tell us how they feel about their trips to the hearing doctor so that we can make any vital changes needed to hearing services for deaf young people across the UK."

The event takes place from 10am-4.30pm. Places are limited and must be booked in advance. For info call 020 7014 1107; or e-mail: valerie.copenhagen@ndcs.org.uk

It's lovely in the water

RESIDENTS of all ages can swim in a mobile pool, which has been at Northwold Primary School since September. The pool is open until December and has classes ranging from beginners lessons, to women only sessions. It is open from 9am-3.30pm for school swimming; from 4pm-6pm for children's lessons; and from 6pm-8.30pm for adults and community groups learning to swim. The latest round of courses begins on 1 November.

The mobile pool is part of Make a Splash London, and is funded by the Council, Play Sport London, the Amateur Swimming Association, City and Hackney NHS and private sponsors. Young Hackney's new voice

After months of campaigning, candidates and supporters gathered at the Town Hall to hear the results of the Hackney Youth Parliament election – and be a part of local democracy

By Gracia Douglas

THE Hackney Youth Parliament (HYP) election campaign reached its climax on 15 October, when young people turned out in force to cheer on candidates at Hackney Town Hall.

The elections were the highlight of Local Democracy Week from 11-15 October, a national initiative that aims to connect young people with their local council.

The candidates had been campaigning since August to secure votes that would win them a seat.

Voting took place at secondary schools, colleges and youth clubs throughout the week. More than 3,600 young people aged 11 to 19, who live, study or work in Hackney cast their votes across the borough's four neighbourhood areas –

“The Council is absolutely committed to supporting the work of the Youth Parliament”

Homerton, North East, Shoreditch and Stoke Newington. This was a big increase on the previous election. The 20 successful candidates celebrated after a nerve-wracking count in the Assembly Hall, and the audience cheered and whooped in support as the results were announced.

The young people will now join seven other members from different youth forums that make up the HYP. It aims to be the voice of young people in Hackney; to regularly consult young people on their views; to be involved in Council decision-making; to make positive changes; and to keep young people informed about issues that affect them.

Cllr Rita Krishna, Cabinet Member for Children's Services, said: “The elections are a fantastic example of youth democracy in action. The Council is absolutely committed to supporting the work of the Youth Parliament to ensure it continues to be an effective voice for young people in Hackney.”

In the morning, local school pupils were invited to an information fair, where they could learn more about local democracy, and also about services available for young people in the borough.

Hackney Youth Parliament Election 2010

Jermain Jackman, 15, is one of the five parliament members for Stoke Newington.

He said of the elections: "It was an exciting and anxious time for all of us, but I'm now really looking forward to working on the issues that affect young people in the borough."

Up for discussion

EARLIER in the afternoon a panel faced a barrage of tough questions from young people, including pupils from local schools.

Mayor of Hackney, Jules Pipe; Steve Belk, Deputy Chief Executive of The Learning Trust; Vicky Hobart, Consultant in Public Health at NHS City & Hackney; Superintendent Mark Bird, Hackney Police; and two HYP candidates, Matthew Oyetunji and Rhasan Brunner were put on the spot.

The range of topics raised showed that young people in the borough have a real appetite for current affairs. This was also reflected in schools across the borough during Local Democracy Week, when councillors took part in question and answer sessions with students.

What's next for the members?

THE new HYP members will undergo training to help them in their new role, before their fortnightly meetings begin.

Over the last two years, HYP members have developed their own constitution, visited Downing Street and met Government ministers; travelled to the US to report back on the election of President Barack Obama; and represented Hackney at national youth events.

Among their successes has been working with the Council to gain funding to renovate and build youth clubs, including the new centre in Stoke Newington. They have also carried out research projects among young people on child poverty and anti-social behaviour, and met police and local councillors to ensure young people's voices were getting heard around issues such as stop and search.

Born to be Bolshie

Fashion designer Rhiannon Jones in her work-live space, which she shares with some of her creations (below)

By
Marcel Reinard

IT'S possible to have sensory over-stimulation in young fashion designer Rhiannon Jones's studio.

As you negotiate the colour clashes of her seemingly chaotic work-live space, you hope not to step on something delicate and expensive.

The 18-year-old has an energy in step with her numerical age, but wisdom beyond her years. Already she sells clothes internationally under her label Bolshie; has just exhibited designs at London Fashion Week (LFW); appeared in national newspapers; been filmed for a BBC documentary; and had her clothes donned by the likes of Alexandra Burke and Lady Gaga. Amazingly she arrived in Hackney from her hometown Beverley, Yorkshire, two years ago without knowing how to use a sewing machine.

"I've always been into fashion. Pretty much as soon as I could speak I was dressing myself," says the Kingsland Road resident.

Did her early style jar with school life?

Rhiannon's face cringes, before she catches herself. She says: "I didn't like being told what to do, and my school was very strict. I used to change my uniform; wearing skinny trousers, rips and stuff, make up and jewellery. And they hated my hair."

Rhiannon defied convention further by leaving school before she was supposed to sit her GCSEs. "I knew what I wanted to do and how I was going to do it," she says.

She was accepted on Hackney Community College's (HCC) Fashion BTEC and came to London shortly after. She explains: "HCC cared more about talent, not the grades or what you look like. They taught me everything technical, now I can use my creativity to extend it myself."

But the turning point came during her visit to LFW last year. "I just wore a couple of things I'd designed, rocked up with my invitation and there were 20 paparazzi following me shouting 'Over here!' Suddenly newspapers and magazines were interested."

Soon after, Rhiannon began her first collection, which was subsequently purchased by Soho boutique Machine-A. And this year LFW accepted her as a show designer.

She says: "People tend to think things just happen, you get spotted and suddenly everything is successful. But there's a lot of hard work involved."

The Bolshie label is currently run solely by Rhiannon, with constant calls and e-mails, selling, chasing materials, plus the designing itself.

Not all coverage received has been welcome, however. Rhiannon explains: "One newspaper wrote 'Lady Bolshie' on the whole Lady Gaga thing. Then others said I was just a Lady Gaga wannabe. I guess they're always looking for comparisons.

"There was so much press about my image it wiped out what I do. This year people were saying 'oh my god, so you're a designer'. I let my work speak for itself."

Looking at her studio –

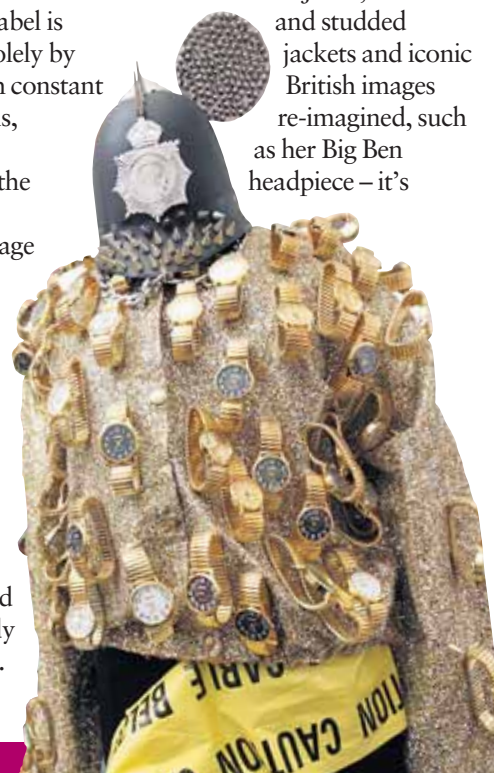

Union Jacks, slashed and studded jackets and iconic British images re-imagined, such as her Big Ben headpiece – it's hard not to feel the influence of punk.

But Rhiannon explains: "I wouldn't say I'm influenced by punk, but I do just get influenced by the things around me. I like to base everything in my environment, like having photoshoots in the launderette next door or the newsagent."

Are the owners happy? She laughs: "Yeah these places are my local shops. They know me, they know what I do, plus some of them are quite happy to have a bunch of girls in there."

Does she 'smell' the fear in others now she's got a 'taste' of success? Rhiannon says: "Some people seem to be a bit, what's she doing? She's 18. But you don't always have to go to university and be in debt. Get over it I reckon. I don't think it really matters what your age, or race or culture is as long as you're doing good stuff."

THE GREEN GENIE

All your recycling questions answered

Q: I noticed that some of my neighbours have nets that cover their green boxes. How can I get one of these?

A: The Council provides net covers with every new green box ordered. The net covers help to contain recycling and also prevent any unwanted items being deposited into your green box by passers by. They are elasticated and simple to use.

If you already have a green box but need a net, call:

020 8356 6688 to request one free of charge. Your net will be delivered with instructions for use. Please remember to tie it on to your green box using the ties provided.

Make a textile pledge

By
Sarah Menz

A NEW campaign to encourage residents to recycle their unwanted clothes, shoes and other household textiles has been launched.

DID YOU KNOW?

Residents who make a pledge could win a free place on a TRAIID 'sew good' workshop

Textiles 2010 (Make Your Pledge) is aimed at reducing the one million tonnes of clothes, shoes and textiles that end up in landfill each year in the UK.

Residents who sign up to the online campaign could win a free place on a 'sew good' workshop. Run by charity TRAIID (Textile Recycling for Aid and International Development), the workshops teach people how to turn old textiles into new clothing.

Textiles 2010 is run by the North London Waste Authority (NLWA), which manages waste disposal in Hackney and six other London boroughs.

Hackney has 50 textile banks at locations including schools and car parks and 'bring sites' where other materials can be recycled. Textiles and shoes can also be collected through the green box scheme.

Most textiles are synthetic fabrics like nylon and polyester, which don't break down if they are sent to landfill sites. And when natural garments decompose they produce methane, a harmful greenhouse gas that contributes to climate change.

The production of textiles also uses a lot of energy through making, packing, transporting, selling and caring for clothes, curtains, sheets and towels.

Residents getting involved in the Big Plant

Off the ground with Big Plant

AROUND 200 plants have been settled into the soil by volunteers, who 'earned their place in local history' as they created a community orchard.

For the last six weeks, around 140 people have helped prepare the ground in a corner of Haggerston Park. Then on 16 and 17 October, the park user group and Hackney City Farm asked residents to join in with the fun bit – the Big Plant. More than 40 people arrived over two days, and they planted all manner of berries, as well as grapes, figs, pears, apples and herbs.

Children from nearby Whiston & Goldsmith estate have also helped. Jordan, Stanley and Jermain, who took part in the early stages of the project, returned to plant figs and thistles. They competed to dig the biggest hole, as well as experiencing the joy of worms and snails' nests, said Hackney City Farm's Environment and Enterprise Manager, Gustavo Montes de Oca.

The Council has also supported the project, as has local tree care group the Tree Musketeers, and The London Orchard project, which provided plants.

The fruit will be available for all to share, but will also be picked on dedicated harvest days, and distributed to younger and older neighbours at nearby nurseries and care homes.

Get the most out of your pumpkin

IF you carved a Halloween lantern from a pumpkin this year, there are plenty of alternatives to simply throwing it into your general waste.

If you have a blue bin, put it in there, along with the scrapings from inside the pumpkin. If your pumpkin won't fit in the bin, leave it next to it. All food waste collected in the borough is taken to a composting plant in Edmonton, north London, where it is broken down to produce compost. This is brought back to the borough and used on parks and green spaces to improve the local environment and make Hackney a greener place to live.

Alternatively if you have a compost bin or wormery you can chop up the pumpkin and compost it at home.

If you have some fresh pumpkin to use up, Love Food

Hate
Waste

has a selection of seasonal recipes including pumpkin and coriander soup, pumpkin tart, and toffee apples. To get started, save your pumpkin seeds and make this tasty snack.

Clean Up Clapton Day is part of the Keep Britain Tidy Campaign

Help clean up

RESIDENTS are invited to join the annual flurry of activity in Clapton on 18 November. The aim of Clean Up Clapton Day, part of the Keep Britain Tidy campaign, is to encourage people to take pride in their area. On the day, Council officers will be cleaning chewing gum from the pavements, and teaming up with locals to litter pick, and make small improvements to the area. Police teams and Council officers will also have stalls in the grounds of nearby BSix college, to offer advice on crime prevention, community safety, and to provide information on local services.

For info e-mail: michael.desmond@hackney.gov.uk

Remember to recycle this November

When enjoying your bonfire night party, remember to recycle your drink cans, plastic bottles and food waste.

Business brains

By
Marcel Reinard

THREE groups of savvy teenagers who successfully developed their own businesses were rewarded with a guided tour of Hackney Town Hall and a meeting with the Mayor.

Last academic year, the Stoke Newington School pupils set up on-site companies, putting acumen from their business after-school club into action.

The three companies – offering car washing, bag branding and Christmas events management – explained their profit margins to Mayor of Hackney, Jules Pipe, as well as how overheads, human resources issues and customer complaints affected their businesses.

Speaking of his car washing firm, Finn, 13, said: “Eventually we had so many customers we started hiring staff, so we had to come up with job descriptions, questionnaires and have interviews.”

But on customer services, he added: “Once we got a formal complaint: the client thought we hadn’t done a good enough job. So we had to redo the work and pay the staff.”

Companies split the profits between charity donations and paying wages for themselves and staff. During the 13 October meeting, the Mayor explained some of the borough’s booming business sectors and the ways a Council is funded, before presenting the pupils with an award for their work.

Career and enterprise teacher Barbara Bouman said: “The students got to learn all sorts of skills – creativity, leadership and business competition and presentation, it’s been great for co-operation and taking responsibility.”

News in brief

Talking shop for the day

WORK experience has come a bit early for some Colvestone Primary School pupils. Four to five-year-olds from Colvestone visited a City Marks & Spencer’s store on 14 October as part of a class plan to raise their understanding of the working world. The 30 children helped choose a dress for a mannequin, and served each other on the food hall tills. Pupil Khadija, five, said: “I really enjoyed it. It was fun and I liked being on the till.” The school was taking part in Work Week, an initiative from the borough’s education business partnership Inspire! to give children an opportunity to engage with work places and business people. A vet, a lawyer, and Police Community Support Officers came to meet the pupils, while some children saw the interiors of Shoreditch Fire Station, the Hoxton Apprentice restaurant and the Bank of England.

Lucky pupils could watch 2012 competitions in the Stadium (above)

School’s £2.5k garden win

A STOKES Newington school has collected £2,500 to create a wildlife garden, after coming runner-up in a biodiversity contest for London schools.

St Thomas Abney School narrowly missed out on the £10,000 top prize in the Veolia Wild Green Schools competition, which encourages the improvement of wildlife areas, while helping teachers to offer lessons outdoors. Judges were so impressed with the school’s pitch, that extra funding was allocated to make their idea a reality.

The pupils and teachers want to transform a strip of garden at the front of the school into a nature area. Their plans feature space for teachers to use as an outdoors classroom, while creating a welcoming entrance for pupils and parents. John Clarke, teacher at Sir Thomas

Abney, said: “People from across the school contributed to the design of the wildlife garden so we’re all really excited about the difference that this prize will make.”

The project is organised by charity London Wildlife Trust on behalf of environmental services firm Veolia.

Free 2012 tickets for students

ONE-in-eight London school children will be able to see the London 2012 Games for free.

The Greater London Authority (GLA) has announced that more than 120,000 tickets will be available to young people aged 10 to 18, giving many a chance to watch world-class athletes perform at some of the many Games venues.

To be eligible for the tickets, schools must be part of the London Organising Committee of the Olympic Games and Paralympic Games (LOCOG)’s Get Set Education programme, which aims to increase awareness and engagement for London 2012.

Almost 60 per cent of London schools are currently signed up to the programme, but it is hoped that the free ticket announcement will boost this figure towards 100 per cent.

Emotional Learning Cards

4, 11 & 12 Nov, Iniva, Rivington Place, EC2A 3BA

'Who are you? Where are you going?' is a new set of Emotional Learning Cards from Iniva that combine contemporary art imagery with questions of social identity.

They feature artwork by established and emerging artists including Jennifer Allora and Guillermo Calzadilla, Hew Locke and Zineb Sedira, presenting a diverse range of images and ideas.

The cards are seen as useful for art therapists, parents and teachers, in part to help children give meaning to their experiences. They have also been used by adults in colleges and galleries. Demonstration workshops are to take place at Rivington Place on 4 Nov, 5-7pm, 11 Nov 6-8pm and 12 Nov 10-12pm.

Theatre tickets

Hackney's Graeae Theatre, Stratford East and New Wolsey present Reasons To Be Cheerful – a new hit me slowly, hit me quick musical featuring the Ian Dury and the Blockheads classics 'Sex and drugs and rock and roll', 'Sweet Gene Vincent', 'Spasticus autisticus' and 'Hit me with your rhythm stick'.

It's 1979; 'Reason to be cheerful (part 3)' is high in the charts. Desperate to see Ian Dury live, Vinnie faces fighting with his own band, a broken heart and a dying father. Set during a time of political change and economic hardship, Ian Dury's songs provide a political and emotional backdrop to this coming-of-age tale.

The musical from the Kingsland Road disabled-led theatre sold out in its Ipswich run, while now in Stratford critics repeatedly commend its energy. Reasons To Be Cheerful runs at Stratford East until 13 November. For more info, visit www.stratfordeast.com

For a chance to win a pair of tickets to the 10 November show, send a postcard to Reasons To Be Cheerful Competition, Hackney Today, Room 82, Hackney Town Hall, Mare Street, E8 1EA; or email: htnews@hackney.gov.uk by 12pm, 8 November. Hackney Winter Night Shelter

17 November, St Mary's New Church Rooms, St Mary's Church, Stoke Newington Church St, N16 9ES

A grassroots charity project providing temporary sheltered accommodation to homeless people is looking to boost its volunteer numbers for the New Year. On 17 November, Hackney Winter Night Shelter (HWNS) will hold an information night, revealing some of its valuable work and how helpers can contribute. The charity provides free meals and beds to rough sleepers at seven churches in the borough, while offering a friendly and safe environment. Volunteers will prepare the halls; put out beds; cook meals; speak with, serve and eat with guests; and make sandwiches for those unable to stay. Some helpers may also sleep overnight.

HWNS started more than 15 years ago and operates each weeknight, accommodating up to 25 guests at a time. It opens on 1 January 2011 to cover the gap just after New Year when some other homeless charity projects temporarily close. Over the four months at the start of this year, the charity handed out more than 2,100 suppers, beds and breakfasts; had 130 different people to stay; and helped 81 people find accommodation. More than 550 volunteers from the Hackney community made it possible, HWNS said.

Krystle Warren

21 October, Rich Mix, 35-47 Bethnal Green Rd, E1

By Gemma Jordan

IT may have been chilly, but a crowd hunkered down to a steaming soulful stew at Rich Mix's Krystle Warren show. Since appearing last autumn on Later with Jules Holland, Kansas-born Krystle – the one-time busker who honed her talents in New York and Paris – now has an eager following. She's been compared to Nina Simone and Jeff Buckley, but Warren has talent of her own. Sitting cross-legged on the floor we listened as she painted urban landscapes with her androgynous, husky tongue. There was no band and no fancy electronics. This was quite simply Krystle, stripped bare, revelling in acoustic isolation.

Throwing 'rock on' hand salutes she mocked her 'depressing' songs, and like an impish troubadour regaled us with profanity-fuelled tales of her travels. Most notably, how she broke her ankle on the Metro; of which she still has a limp. "Note to self, learn your songs" she quipped at one point after making a false start, and then admitted that she'd already played all of her planned numbers and the rest of the set list was marked 'make up'. So, continuing on in the spirit of improvisation Krystle tapped on her guitar and egged us all to sing along. By Frank Sinatra's 'Something Stupid' we were all la-la-la-ing with nostalgic vim. Then, as the final chord ricocheted into silence, came a hooting standing ovation. As we stepped back into the cold city air, the memory of Krystle's velvet sound flowed through our veins like molten chocolate, thawing the pavement beneath. Krystle Warren's album, Circles, is out now.

“We set out to create a high-quality facility for the young people of Stoke Newington, and I think that anyone visiting the centre will agree it is just that: a safe, ultra-modern, inspiring facility for those in the neighbourhood.”

The myplace project group is a team of 13 to 19-year-olds who have been involved with the development of the centre from the outset. Members of the Stoke Newington youth forum will now act as a steering group for the future.

The centre is a bright, colourful and comfortable space that combines areas for dance or sport, health sessions, cooking and IT, as well as smaller break-out rooms for training sessions or interviews.

The building is worth a visit in its own right, having recently been short listed for a Hackney Design Award in the ‘People’s Choice’ category.

The funding for the youth centre revamp was granted through two central Government programmes – Youth Capital Plus, and myplace.

Keeping up confidence

Service user Olga and John from the First Response Provider Team

By
Marcel Reinard

AN older resident who suffered a series of bad falls leading to a spell in hospital has since received day-to-day help from the Council, giving her the independence to stay in her own home.

Olga, 92, lost much of her confidence after twice falling outside her Clapton home last year, requiring stitches and a hospital stay.

She met with First Response Team's (FRPT) John Constable, who explained the team's role

“I don't know what I would do without John and the team, I couldn't afford to pay for someone to come in every day” in assisting older people who have suffered accidents or faced life-threatening illnesses. John became an integral part of Olga's life after she was discharged, helping her discover how she can continue to live at home, where she has been for over 70 years. She said: “I want to be able to walk out again. I don't have the strength to stand for very long, just long enough to make toast.”

Requests were made to have a carer visit every day to look after her personal care needs; for ‘Meals on Wheels’ drop-offs and a wheelchair was ordered to aid travel. Another carer visits up to three times a week to take her shopping or to social visits such as the bingo hall.

Sadly, Olga was diagnosed with a terminal illness in February. The FRPT has continued to provide her with palliative care. Help is also available for those coming to terms with illness, while bereavement support is there for families. “I don't know what I would do without John and the team, I couldn't afford to pay for someone to come in everyday,” Olga said.

This help has returned some of Olga's lost confidence and she knows she is not alone.

News in brief

An artist's impression of the new surgery

Nightingale's new home

CONSTRUCTION has begun on a new Nightingale Practice that will give Clapton patients access to improved clinical and community facilities.

NHS City and Hackney announced that builder East London Lift Co was starting on the new surgery, which will provide close to 1,000 sq metres of purpose-built clinical facilities at an approximate cost of £2.3million. The building is due to be complete in September 2011.

It was commissioned when it became apparent that existing facilities were inadequate for the growing and changing needs of patients. The public and patients were consulted on the redesign in early 2009.

Jill White, Practice Manager, Nightingale Practice said: “The practice has and always will be committed to caring for the physical, psychological and social aspects of our patients' health, incorporating prevention and treatment of disease and the promotion of good health. The new building will enable us to provide a wider range of service to help us achieve this.”

The practice is open as normal during the build, and has moved into temporary accommodation adjacent to the old building. For more info call: 020 8985 8388; or visit: www.thenightingalepractice.co.uk

Speak out on smoking

THE Council's Health in Hackney Scrutiny Commission is seeking views on what more could be done to cut the number of smokers in the borough.

The commission has begun a review to examine how people get information about the dangers of smoking; how the Council and its partners try to engage hard-to-reach groups; and whether employers are doing enough to stop people smoking – or taking it up in the first place.

As part of the review, the commission will look at the possibility of setting up a tobacco control partnership – to include the Council, NHS City and Hackney, Hackney Police – a scheme that has been successful in other London boroughs. Leading experts including the UK Centre for Tobacco Control Studies, based in Queen Mary University of London, will also inform the review.

Residents should make their views known by 26 November. Call: 020 8356 3341; or e-mail: scrutiny@hackney.gov.uk

Your views on Hackney Today

WHAT DO YOU THINK ABOUT YOUR COUNCIL NEWSPAPER?

Circulated to 108,000 homes and businesses in Hackney

Hackney Today is a fortnightly, free newspaper, produced by the Council. Since 2007, it has been redesigned; increased in size to 36 pages; and been short listed in national industry awards in 2008, 2009 and 2010.

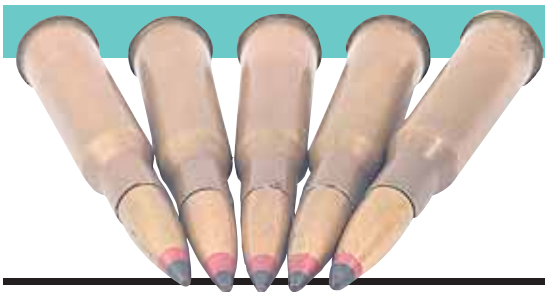

Every year, we ask residents what they think about the paper, so that we can use your feedback to keep improving it. We'd really appreciate it if you could tell us what you think. If you have any ideas about how we can make the paper even better, now is your chance to tell us.

There are also some questions about the quarterly, ward-based Safer Hackney newsletters, which are distributed with Hackney Today.

Newspaper coverage of the Passmore Edwards Free Library tragedy (right); the library in its heyday (above); library assistant Edwin Sarson died after being shot, while Thomas Duddles drank a poisonous photographic chemical

A peculiar case

By Sally England,
Local Studies Librarian

ON his death in 1811, The Times' obituarist wrote of John Passmore Edwards: "He did more good in his time than almost any other of his contemporaries."

In just 14 years over 70 major buildings were established as a result of bequests from the journalist and philanthropist. No doubt he would have been horrified at the dreadful events of 22 June, 1925, that took place in the Hackney library bearing his name.

Recently the Archives discovered the story of a double death at the former Passmore Edwards Free Library in Kingsland Road, now converted into the flats and business units of Passmore House.

By 1925, 63 year old Thomas Duddles had been caretaker of the branch library for 30 years, living on the premises with his disabled wife Elizabeth and married daughter Dorothy. An ex-naval man, he had a keen interest in firearms and also in photography, keeping a collection of guns in his basement workshop, with another area functioning as a dark room. Duddles' assistant, Edwin Sarson, 36, had worked at the library since boyhood, and the two men appeared to get on well together.

On the evening of 22 June after closing the library at 9pm, Sarson went down to the basement to give Mr Duddles the keys. Some time afterwards Mrs Duddles heard a dull thud, which she took to be something dropping through the letter box.

But when the postman arrived later she became worried. Dorothy went to the workshop but the door was locked from the inside and there was no reply to her knocking. Help was summoned from Abraham Klipstein's shop across the road at number 279. Klipstein's sons Raphael and Huda had known Duddles for many years. Raphael, a medical student, had obtained chemicals for his friend to use for his photography hobby, while Huda often visited to carry out odd jobs. The Klipseins managed to push the key out from the lock and retrieve it using a piece of wire. Upon opening the door, Dorothy and the brothers were faced with a scene of horror.

Sarson was face down in a pool of blood, shot through the right eye, his face scorched by the discharge. Two air guns and two rifles were propped up against the wall. Dorothy rushed into the street to call for the police. She was soon joined by Sarson's fiancée, Lydia Schwartz, who had been waiting with Sarson's mother for him to come home and had set out to find him.

Duddles was found in the dark room, lying on his back with bottles nearby, a gun under him, and an empty cartridge case beneath the workbench.

Scrawled on top of the bench was a chalk message in Duddles' handwriting: 'Awful accident. I am mad. Cannot stand it.' He had swallowed one of his photographic chemicals, Prussic Acid (Potassium Cyanide), and died almost instantly.

At the inquest, Duddles' son

Charles described how his father always took great care when cleaning his guns. It was suggested that this was what he had been doing when he had accidentally shot his assistant. Cleaning materials on the workbench suggested this may have been the case. The two men always seemed to be on the best of terms, but Duddles was nearing retirement age and did not wish to leave his post but stay on and increase his pension. Was he angry that Sarson would replace him? Had Sarson's death in fact been murder?

Sarson had told Huda Klipstein that he wasn't keen on the senior post, and had recently complained to his mother that 'Mr Duddles is so hard to get on with. He wants me to do two men's work instead of one'. Lydia Schwartz said Duddles had threatened to get Sarson out from his post, although nobody was aware of any fight between the two men.

The inquest jury returned a decision of suicide whilst of unsound mind in the case of Duddles, and an open verdict in that of Sarson. The Coroner agreed that it was the only possible verdict in the peculiar circumstances of the case.

Mrs Duddles was granted a yearly allowance by Shoreditch Borough Council, but died on 25 September 1925 from complications to a fractured femur. Whether Lydia Schwartz, who had been engaged to Sarson for three years, ever found another sweetheart is unknown.

L-R: PC Nicola Irvine, cyclists Thomas Georgson and Leon Lahovich, and PC Maz Lovegrove with the riders' recovered bikes, worth more than £1,000 in total

Back in the saddle

A NEW Hackney Police unit has reunited 14 bikes with their rightful owners – in its first fortnight.

The Cycle Crime Unit, made up of PC Maz Lovegrove and PC Nicola Irvine, has so far carried out two operations, which have resulted in the recovery of nine high-value stolen bikes, worth around £6,000.

Yvonne Adenle spent around £1,000 to buy her bike and bring it to Hackney from Switzerland. She said: "I was amazed and delighted to get my bike back, which had been stolen in a burglary in August. I brought it over from Switzerland and I am a Swiss national, so it was more than just an object to me."

PC Lovegrove said: "Our team is focused on cracking down on bicycle thieves; reuniting bikes with their owners; and working with residents and visitors to help prevent them from becoming victims of bike crime."

The team also works with cycle shops, encouraging them to register cycle frame numbers and owners' details at the point of purchase.

Recovered cycles that cannot be traced back to their owners are donated to charities in the borough.

Jo Roach, project manager at Pedal Power, said, "Our bikes allow people with profound and complex needs to enjoy cycling, with some of our members training for the Special Olympics."

Free bike ID chipping

THE Council and Hackney Police are teaming up this winter to microchip and register bicycles free of charge.

A series of events will be held throughout November and December, part of a Hackney-wide initiative to tackle cycle-theft. When police recover a registered, microchipped bicycle, the data contained in the chip can be used to identify the owner, and return the bicycle. The chips, which normally cost £15, can be attached to any fixed-frame bicycle.

The events, supported by the Council's Community Safety Team, and by Springfield, New River, Cazenove and Hackney Downs Safer

Neighbourhoods policing teams take place on: 15 Nov, 8am-10am, Stamford Hill Estate, N16; 22 Nov, 1pm-4pm, Clapton Common, Upper Clapton Road, E5; 29 Nov, 11am-2pm, outside Sainsbury's, Stamford Hill, N16; and 3 Dec 2010, 4pm-7pm, outside Manor House station, N4

Nominate your top lollipop

RESIDENTS have until 21 November to nominate someone in their area as Lollipop Person of the Year.

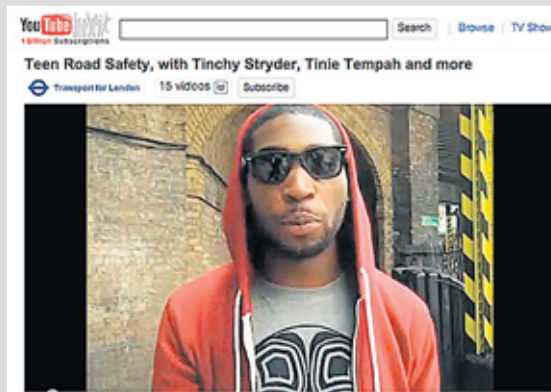

Organisers Kwik Fit Insurance are asking primary school pupils to work with their schools to send in stories, drawings, photographs, videos or even songs explaining why their local lollipop person ought to be considered the best in the country. The nationwide campaign recognises the work of the men and women who patrol school crossings throughout the year.

The one short listed candidate will receive £100, with the school picking up £500. Whoever bags the top prize will win £500, while £3,000 goes to the school. The winner will be announced in January 2011.

Tinie Tempah in a TfL road safety clip on YouTube

Road safety

CHART-topping Londoners and football's rising stars are supporting a campaign to remind young people to take care on the roads this winter.

The clocks went back on 31 October. To coincide with the extra hour of darkness in the evening, Transport for London (TfL) has launched the latest phase of its Look out for your mates initiative, now in its 10th year, to highlight the importance of being aware of potential road dangers in the Capital.

Music performers including Tinie Tempah, Tinchy Stryder and Eliza Doolittle have filmed online videos to back the safety scheme, while young players from Premiership academies including West Ham, Tottenham Hotspur and Fulham have posted clips on their club websites. Chelsea and Arsenal have also pledged support for the campaign. Road collisions involving teenagers typically occur on weekdays at peak travelling times to and from school. In 2009, 301 teenagers were killed or seriously injured on London's roads.

Job vacancies

Finance & Resources

Internal Auditor

£35,055 - £37,851

Apply by: 8 Nov

You will support the Head of Internal Audit in delivering independent appraisals of Council departments or other designated organisations; and in measuring the effectiveness of internal controls and reviewing the use of Council resources.

You'll have sound practical experience of undertaking systems and regularity audit projects, including the production of detailed documentation. A proven track record of presenting quality internal reports and information in a variety of formats, together with an understanding of risk factors and control matrices will also be essential.

You'll be a self-motivated and effective team player with the credibility and confidence to influence chief officers, and ensure that recommendations from audits are monitored and implemented. Your technical skills will be supported by membership of the Institute of Internal Auditors or Association of Accounting Technicians.

Legal & Democratic Services

Elections vacancies (on as-needed basis)

Various roles & rates of pay Apply by: ongoing

We are seeking to recruit and train election and canvassing staff for elections and referendums.

This is an exciting opportunity to earn money while seeing democracy in action.

We are recruiting Polling Station Inspectors; Presiding Officers; Postal Vote Supervisors; Count Supervisors; Poll Clerks; Postal Vote Clerks and Count Assistants.

We are looking for committed individuals who can demonstrate: good communication and interpersonal skills with an ability to relate to the public; awareness of, sensitivity to and commitment to equalities and cultural diversity; an ability to work under pressure and meet deadlines; a professional and politically neutral manner; willingness to attend any training sessions provided; exceptional attention to detail, and access to transport to and from the count centre and polling stations in the borough.

For all posts, applicants must be over 16 and eligible to work and reside in the UK.

Full training will be provided. Rates of pay are set each year by London Councils for local elections and the Cabinet Office for parliamentary elections. The rates of pay have not yet been finalised for 2011. Elections staff are employed by the Returning Officer not Hackney Council. All applicants must be impartial and not canvass for, assist or openly support a candidate in the elections that they are working on.

Social Worker

£30,345 - £37,851

Apply by: 14 Nov

Social workers need good support from the organisation they work for, freedom to practise at a high level, and a range of intellectual abilities and emotional resilience to bring to the task. In short, social workers need to be highly professional. These are the type of people that we want working for us in Hackney. We have several units up and running and are now recruiting skilled social workers, who are committed to an evidence based approach and are excited about the impact we can have with the children and families we work with in Hackney. The successful candidate will hold a recognised General Social Care Council (GSCC) qualification, be able to thrive in a complex and demanding environment and have experience in social work with families. It is also expected that you will have the ability to create a rapport and build relationships with children and parents or carers.

2011 Census workers

Various roles, salaries & working patterns

On March 27, 2011, the next census takes place. A census is a count of the population, and the UK has one every ten years. The information is used to plan and allocate funding to local services. This is generating over 35,000 temporary part-time and full-time jobs in England and Wales, approximately 250 of which are in Hackney.

There are a wide range of roles on offer, and contract periods range from a few weeks to several months. All roles call for flexibility regarding working hours, with the requirement to work up to 8pm at times, as well as weekend working.

Most roles will be physically demanding, working outside and dealing with the public. Successful applicants will need to manage their workload effectively in order to meet timescales. Before they start work, the Census Team will ensure that new staff have the knowledge and skills required to carry out their responsibilities. Therefore, they will be given paid training that is specific to their role before starting work.

Details of all the jobs that are available will be added to the census jobs website until January 2011, and residents can register for job alerts so that details of all jobs that meet their criteria will be e-mailed to them.

Job Profile Tracy Barnett

Assistant Director, Audit and Anti-Fraud, talks to Hackney Today about the Internal Auditor role

Why is this role rewarding?

Internal audit has a vital role to play in ensuring the Council's internal control systems and corporate governance arrangements are maintained. In the current climate of major efficiency savings, the audit service will be relied upon to provide guidance and assist managers. This is a newly formed service so the successful candidate will have the opportunity to help shape the service and influence how the service evolves.

What are the challenges?

Being part of a newly created in-house team, the Internal Auditor will need to help raise awareness of, and promote the service to, senior managers across the Council. Building the reputation of the team; gaining the trust of managers; and promoting the Anti Fraud & Corruption Policy will be all be key challenges.

What attributes should the successful candidate have?

The successful candidate will be an outgoing, confident communicator (oral and written), with good interpersonal skills and the ability to influence. They'll need to have a good knowledge of internal control and corporate governance arrangements within the public sector.

They'll be able to deal with staff at all levels and will be a team player who leads by example. High ethical standards are essential.

What make this team a good place to work?

The Audit and Anti-Fraud team has a Council-wide role, which means the work we do is varied and challenging. Managers in the team recognise that a good working environment and team spirit contributes to providing a productive service, and we make a real effort to encourage this.

Recipes straight from the ovens at Hoxton Apprentice

www.hoxtonapprentice.com

Until recently, Reece Senghore, 18, had never had a job where he wasn't bored. He made a stab at starting a career in catering by studying at Waltham Forest College. But he found it 'boring' and caused so many problems, he was asked to leave. This made him realise he had to turn his life around, so after a meeting with Head Chef, Leon Seraphin, Reece joined the Hoxton Apprentice as a catering and hospitality assistant in September. Since then he has not been bored. While being an active participant in the busy kitchen, he is also working hard towards taking his NVQ qualification in catering and hospitality. Now Reece's ambition is to be a head chef like Leon.

Reece said: "The Hoxton Apprentice is great. I get hands-on experience and I love working as part of the back-of-house team! I'm learning new skills every day."

Walnut Bread

Makes two 2lb loaves

Preparation time
2hrs

Cooking time
1hr mins

Ingredients

- 25g fresh or 2 sachets easy blend dried yeast
- 1tbs runny honey
- 100ml walnut oil
- 2tbs chopped fresh rosemary (optional)
- 500g strong white flour, & extra for dusting
- 200g strong wholemeal flour
- 2tsp salt
- 250g walnuts, roughly chopped

for a further five minutes

- Place the dough back in the mixing bowl, cover with a damp tea towel and prove in a warm place until more than double in size
- Turn the dough out onto a floured surface and cut it in two. Roll it into sausage shapes, tapering at each end. Place on a floured baking sheet, cover with a damp tea towel and leave to double in size again
- Preheat oven to 220°C/425°F/gas 7
- Slash tops of loaves. Place an ovenproof dish of water in the bottom of the oven; leave it undisturbed for 10 minutes to create steam
- Bake loaves for 30-45 minutes on the middle shelf above the water. They should be golden on the top and should sound hollow when tapped on the bottom. Cool on a wire rack

Compiled by Paula Daley

Method

- Dissolve yeast and honey in 600ml warm water and place it in a mixing bowl. Add oil, rosemary, flour, and salt to this mixture and bring together to form a dough
- Turn out onto clean worktop and knead for 10 minutes. Knead in the walnuts and work it

The Hoxton Apprentice is a social enterprise set up to train unemployed Hackney people – both in the kitchen and front of house.

Six-month apprenticeships prepare people for the workplace and give them the chance to gain an NVQ in Hospitality. Profits are returned to Training For Life, the charity which operates the restaurant, to deliver more training for unemployed people.

Which way for Stoke Newington?

If you live or work in, or regularly visit Stoke Newington, take the chance to tell the Council your views about traffic conditions in the area. Would you support the removal of the current one-way traffic system (gyratory) along Stoke Newington High Street (A10), Rectory Road and Evering Road? And how could the Council improve conditions for people walking, cycling or using buses in the area? The one-way system is part of the Transport for London (TfL) Road Network, and TfL is the main highway authority responsible for the road layout. The Council is responsible for minor alterations to improve other local roads. The Council will take concerns that residents and businesses raise to its discussion with TfL. Feedback will also inform Council decisions on transport, road safety and environmental improvements in the area. Drop-in sessions where residents can learn more take place on 12 Nov, 5pm-8pm, Morrison's Stamford Hill, N16; and 4 Dec, 10am-2.30pm William Patten School, Stoke Newington Church Street, N16. The consultation runs until 10 January 2011. Visit: www.hackney.gov.uk/sn-gyratory To request a paper survey, or a version in a language other than English call: 020 8356 4891; or e-mail: consultation@hackney.gov.uk

Adult social care

DO you use adult social care services in Hackney? How could information and advice about these services be better? The Council would like to know what difficulties residents have had when trying to get information or advice; how and where they get it; and what could make it easier for people to access. The results will be used to help provide better access to information and advice about adult social care. Complete a short survey at: www.hackney.gov.uk/trasc-info-and-advice For info or to request a paper survey, call: 020 8356 3966; e-mail: trasc@hackney.gov.uk; or write to: TRASC Team, FREEPOST LON18819, Room 82, Hackney Town Hall, E8 1EA.

The Mayor and Councillors

Councillors are elected by Hackney residents and serve for four years. The last borough elections were in May 2010.

Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee the Council and its services.

They hold advice surgeries where residents can meet their local representative and ask them to take up issues that may be of concern.

Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, councillors can often point people in the right direction and tell residents who they need to see.

Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – illustrated in the map opposite.

To check which councillor covers your area, or confirm surgery times, call: 020 8356 3373. More info: www.hackney.gov.uk/l-mayor-cabinet-councillors.htm

The Mayor

Jules Pipe

Hackney has an executive Mayor, Jules Pipe, who is not a councillor, but is directly elected by the entire borough. The Mayor is the political leader of the Council, overseeing the budget and all Council services. Civic and ceremonial duties are undertaken by the Speaker of the Council who is elected annually from the borough's 57 councillors. The current Speaker is Cllr Sally Mulready.

Driving down road casualties

Elaine Beckett, Principal Road Safety Officer

Elaine, 57, joined the Council in March this year after 22 years with Essex County Council. She now leads the Road Safety Team in delivering a diverse programme of education and training aimed at providing local people with the skills to keep safe on the roads.

Elaine enjoys meeting and working with people of all ages. She feels very lucky to be in a position where she can work with diverse groups and a variety of partners, both internally and externally, to provide road safety advice for all road users.

Having been involved in cycle training for most of her career, Elaine completed the free two-hour cycle training session available to adults in Hackney herself in August. She said: "I'd urge anybody to take advantage of the free training. It's so valuable to build confidence about cycling on the roads, even if you already ride a bike regularly." She is passionate about her work as part of the Council's Streetscene Department and is keen to continue developing and sharing road safety best practices.

Safer travel for all

THE Council's Road Safety Team is responsible for providing cycle training, school crossing patrols, in-car safety, driver training, the junior road safety officer scheme and motorcycling training.

With set national and local targets to reduce the number of road casualties, the team focuses on road safety education in schools and colleges, and campaigns aimed at changing people's behaviour.

In the UK, over 3,000 people die each year on the roads, and tens of thousands are seriously injured.

But things are improving, and Hackney mirrored the national trend in 2009, with a reduction in the number of road casualties. However, the team wants to make sure that this good work continues.

One of the most important campaigns at this time of the year is Be Safe Be Seen. The team is particularly targeting children, cyclists and motorcyclists – now that the clocks have gone back and the nights are drawing in.

Hackney mirrored a national trend in 2009, with a reduction in the number of road casualties

In April this year, cycle training was brought in-house, and the Council has delivered more national standard 'Bikeability' cycle training to children living in Hackney than in previous years. There has also been an increase in the number of adults taking up the free cycle training on offer in Hackney.

DID YOU KNOW

Adults in Hackney are entitled to a free, two-hour cycle training session to boost skills and confidence
